The Hotel Allegro has been an important part of Chicago history since the late 1800's when the original Bismarck Hotel was built. Throughout the decades, the hotel has hosted countless artists, entertainers, politicians and celebrities. Today Hotel Allegro is an integral part of Chicago's theater and business districts, providing four-star service, first class accommodations and thoughtful amenities for all of its guests.

1894

The first Bismarck Hotel is developed by Emil & Karl Eitel, brothers from Stuttgart, Germany.

1910'S

The Eitel's pioneer the "comforts of luxury" by installing ice-boxes with mechanical refrigeration in the hotel's kitchen. Air conditioning is installed in the hotels dining rooms. Due to WWI anti-German sentiment, the Bismarck is renamed the Randolph Hotel. However the Bismarck name is restored just a few years later.

1920's

The Eitel brothers purchase the property east of the hotel to create a grand structure that would include the hotel, a theater and an office building. The property would span one full block on Randolph. The original hotel was razed as the Eitel brothers developed plans for the new Bismarck Hotel and Palace Theatre. The new Bismarck Hotel re-opens with 600 rooms; the strong Art Deco influence at the time was reflected in design elements such as the spacious lobby's wide marble staircase with a hand-wrought balustrade & custom brass light fixtures

1933

The Bismarck becomes the first place in Chicago to serve alcohol after Prohibition was repealed, tapping the first legal keg of beer just one minute after midnight.

1950-1960's

The Wirtz family, owners of the Chicago Blackhawks, purchases the Bismarck Hotel from the Eitel brothers. The Bismarck becomes the nation's first hotel to install air conditioning throughout the building, and the first hotel in the Midwest to offer telephones in each room. The Bismarck becomes a stomping ground for the city's power brokers, a tradition that continues through the next decade. Politicians dine daily in the hotel's Walnut Room.

S T O R Y

1970-1980's

Located directly across the street from City Hall, the Bismarck becomes the official headquarters for the Cook County Democratic Organization. The Bismarck closes the Palace Theater, and reopens it as the Pavilion Room where Mayor Richard J. Daley holds his pre-election precinct captain rallies. This is where Daley shouts his infamous "Work, work, work!" phrase to thousands of Democratic workers, driving them into neighborhoods to secure more votes. The Bismarck goes through a series of renovations and reinventions, none of which has staying power.

1990's

Pal/Met purchases the hotel and the former Bismarck Hotel opens as the four-star Hotel Allegro, the first Kimpton Hotel in Chicago. The hotel's opening becomes part of a revival of the Loop and rebirth of the city's theater district. The name Allegro is chosen for its meaning of "upbeat and lively," precisely the type of environment the city wanted to create in the revitalized district.

Early 2000's

The hotel becomes a hotspot for celebrity sightings as pop stars and rock bands make their stay at the lively Allegro including the likes of Poison, Pink, Christina Aguilera, Tommy Lee, The Killers, The Roots, Perry Ferrell, and Rihanna. The hotel's restaurant 312 Chicago hosts politicians from neighboring City Hall while the lounge, Encore, hosts post production parties for actors and producers from the nearby theater district. Hotel Allegro undergoes a $40,000,000 makeover through the vision of interior designer Martha Angus. The massive renovation is defined by all new guest rooms, completely modernized systems, and a reverence for the buildings past. Committed to environmentally responsible hospitality, Hotel Allegro becomes one of the first of five hotels in Illinois to earn Green Seal Silver certification for its sustainable practices.

2015

Bar Allegro is born.
